WHY RUN FOR XLP?

A high percentage of children and young people in inner London are struggling; their home lives can be financially and emotionally challenging, and many find themselves low-achievers academically. Their attitudes and behavioural needs often alienate them from their own families and communities, and can undermine their sense of self-worth. Many are excluded or at risk of exclusion from school, leading some to rediscover their identity through gang-related antisocial behaviour and even crime.

XLP is about hope. It is about getting alongside young people living in our inner cities and helping them see alternatives to what can sometimes seem a hopeless situation. XLP youth workers are tackling issues of educational failure, poverty and deprivation, helping young people make wise lifestyle choices and to realise their potential. For over a decade, XLP has witnessed positive stories of young people whose futures have changed from going nowhere to having hope and purpose.

This is why Kamil Leoniuk and Luke McDermott, Liquid Capital employees, have decided to run the London Marathon for us.
